

Feb 2026 - Important update

“SQA is becoming Qualifications Scotland, Scotland’s new national awarding body.”

“The qualifications you’re working towards and those you’ve already achieved remain trusted and recognised, delivered by a new organisation created to better support learners and partners.”

Who is Qualifications Scotland

Qualifications Scotland is Scotland's national awarding body, designing and delivering trusted qualifications that recognise knowledge and skills. Based in Scotland, they create qualifications that are valued and used worldwide.

The organisation supports learners, educators and employers through expert guidance and bespoke solutions, adapting to the changing needs of learners and the economy. Qualifications Scotland is committed to transparency in decision-making and continuously seeks new ways to improve its services.

Qualifications Scotland collaborates with thousands of education and training professionals and industry experts to develop and deliver relevant qualifications.

The organisation works in partnership with learners, schools, colleges, universities, training providers and employers. This ensures qualifications accurately assess what learners know and can do. These qualifications create meaningful pathways for lifelong learning and successful careers.
